Prosopon School of Iconology

The Prosopon School of Iconology was founded by Russian Master Iconographer Vladislav Andrejev after his immigration to the United States. Over the years, Vladislav Andrejev's iconographic technique and teaching method have undergone a development and standardization, resulting in a distinct "school" of painting and interpretation. This school of iconography introduces students to the practice and theory of the ancient Christian art of icon writing in the Russian-Byzantine tradition, and functions as a contemporary step in its living development.

In 2000, the Prosopon School of Iconology was formally named, receiving the blessing of the hierarchs of the Orthodox Church of America. In this new stage of growth, the School is composed of the founder and a core faculty of trained instructors including his sons Dmitri and Nikita, heading Prosopon studios in locations throughout the United States, Russia and Europe.

Instructor

Born in St. Petersburg, Russia, Dmitri Andreyev came to the United States in 1991 to study traditional iconography with his father, Vladislav Andreyev, master iconographer and founder of the Prosopon School of Iconology.

While living in New York City, Dmitri established the Prosopon School New York City Studio.

As an instructor of the school, Dmitri regularly leads iconography workshops around the country. He currently lives with his family in Brookfield, Vermont, where he works on commission and teaches private classes in his home studio.

Russian-Byzantine Style & Technique

The Prosopon School's iconographic technique is rooted in the 15th century Russian School. As is fitting for the icon's sacred function, predominantly natural materials are used: wood panels covered in linen and natural marble gesso gilded with genuine gold. Icons are painted in egg tempera using natural pigments, and are sealed with a traditional linseed oil finish. The finished compositions are originals with forms and colors following Orthodox Church canons and based on Russian and Byzantine tradition.

Prosopon Iconography Workshop Retreat

The Priory Spirituality Center is excited to expand its offerings in iconography by hosting a Prosopon Iconography Workshop Retreat for both beginning and intermediate students. Students will be invited to paint a simple icon in the Russian-Byzantine tradition following step-by-step technical instructions. Each of the six days of this intensive icon workshop will begin with a prayer experience and presentation of the theology which is the foundation of this unique art and prayer form. The “writing” (painting) of icons is a visual, artistic prayer practice involving Scripture, tradition, line, light and color.

While taught from an Orthodox perspective, the workshop is open to all people.

The Icons

Beginning students will write an icon of Archangel Michael or Archangel Gabriel.

Intermediate students will write an icon of Archangel Raphael.
